

HARRIS COLLEGE OF NURSING & HEALTH SCIENCES

GARRETT MICHAEL JAMES

Harris college needs a representative that will listen to all their individual voices and bring to the house sessions a concise opinion and get resolutions and bills passed. I do believe I am the person taht can fill this role. I am a compassionate creative strategic leader who cares about TCU and wants to see our university's flaws fixed.

NINABELLE SITLER

I want to be a part of SGA's House of Representatives because I have a passion for the success and evolution of this school. I want to become more interconnected with my campus and peers. Being a part of SGA would allow me to advocate for my peers, as well as learn about the concerns of others on campus. Continuing my role as an SGA House Representative for the Harris College of Nursing and Health Sciences is important to me because I have seen the growth of campus throughout my semester in House and would like to continue to foster that growth with the help of my peers.

JADEN BILLINGS

I want to play a part in some of the things that go on around campus. I've heard about how cool SGA is from some other students, so I definitely want to be a part of it!

SHAYLEE MCKEOWN

These past few weeks that I have been involved in SGA have been really rewarding to me. I really enjoy being able to represent my constituency and the student body as a whole. Serving as a part of the recruitment and retention committee has broadened my perspective on the representatives from each college. After interviewing different candidates, I understand more people's "Why". Hearing why people want to serve the student body and what they want to do to make TCU a better campus inspires me to pursue my own "why". I want to make TCU a safe place for students to express themselves and a positive environment where everyone wants their peers to succeed. The student body needs my voice to represent them because I am passionate about serving. I also am willing to listen to any idea or suggestion made by the student body, and determine what the best way is to make sure their voice is heard. When it comes to legislation, I always try to put my personal beliefs second, and first thing about what my constituency as a whole, and what the student body would benefit from most. Now that I have a semester of SGA under my belt and understand the procedures of it, I am excited to take on a more active role in House if I am re-elected.

ANASTASIA HELMS

I love SGA and this campus more than anything! Being able to serve SGA for three years now has been the biggest blessing, and it would be an honor to continue.

GEO MARTINEZ

As a nursing major, I love helping people. It's my passion. It's what I do. Being a member of the SGA House of Representatives would be another avenue to help me live out my personal mission and make a difference on campus. Throughout my college career, as an RA, orientation leader, or tour guide, my proudest moments have been when I'm able to be a part of something bigger than myself and work with the amazing, brilliant, and talented students of TCU. SGA needs me because of my love for others and my passion for the student body that is connected to each other and invested in our school.

GARRETT JAMES

After serving on SGA for the past three years, I want to be elected for one more year to bring SGA representatives closer to their constituency. Being the vessel for students voices and ideas to the upper administration is not only an honor but a privilege. Speaking on a more broad level, I care about TCU and everyone in it. I think there are a few crucial steps that need to be taken to make the culture here the best it can be. The one I am most passionate about is making students here at TCU engage with each other more about their faith. Whether it is having a meaningful conversation to someone with the same belief or listening to someone who is sharing their passionate faith to you, these are conversations and attitudes that need to be present to make TCU the best it can be.
